

JustMoney Movement Theory of Change

Approaches

Education and reflection among diverse UK Christians and churches on using money for good – both practically and theologically.

Communication to reach diverse new audiences and engage existing supporters.

Equipping individuals to campaign for a fairer, greener future.

High level influencing: policy lobbying & media, for fairer policies and practices.

Thought leadership: developing thinking and providing a credible, distinctive voice on issues of financial and economic justice

Activities

Educational resources, signposting, & events both online and in-person, including through MMC and in partnership with others.

Comms engaging supporters via newsletter and events; reaching new audiences via website, social media, blog and events.

Campaign actions for individuals e.g. on ethical finance, fair tax, or corporate justice.

Policy reports, technical reports, lobbying meetings, media outreach, interviews & articles, high level events.

Thought leadership resources and events, often in partnership with others.

Outcomes

Wide range of Christians see how they use money as part of their faith – understanding their responsibility and their power as citizens.

Christians change their behaviour to align their money with their values.

Churches teach about money and make ethical decisions about their own finances.

Christians have greater awareness of how money can shape a fairer, greener future.

Campaigns contribute to fairer tax policy and more ethical, transparent financial and corporate behaviour.

Stronger Christian voice in public discourse on finance and economics.

Impact

A larger, more engaged, and more diverse movement of Christians contributes to a wider movement of all faiths and none, acting to ensure money is used for good.

Political space opens up for policy and practice change.

Fairer, greener policies and practices in tax, ethical finance and corporate accountability, by governments, financial institutions, churches and companies.

Vision

A world where money is used to shape a fairer, greener future.
